THE REVIEW. NO. VIII.

The territory to be purchased with the two millions was described in the bill as "lying on the Atlantic ocean, and the Gulf of Mexico and eastward of the Mississippi." Mr. Randolph objected to the clause as it stood, and moved to substitute "the Bay of Perdido" instead of the "River Mississippi." His reasons were: That a great part of the territory embraced by the bill, namely all that tract lying east of the Mississippi, and between the Perdido, being about 250 miles by 100, comprising a tract of nearly 25,000 square miles, and unquestionably the most valuable part of the whole purchase, was already claimed by the executive, as being within the limits of the Louisiana treaty; that congress had so far sanctioned the claim as to have legislated upon it by passing an act erecting the shores and waters of the river Mobile into a Collection District; and that after this to pass a law authorising the president to purchase this very territory would not only be compromising the national honor, but might very fairly be construed by Spain as a virtual surrender on our part of our pretensions to the title of it under the treaty. These objections as obvious as so lid, remained unanswered, and certainly they were unanswerable: but notwithstanding the motion was negatived, 68 to 59.

Before we proceed any farther, we think it will be an acceptable service to those of our readers who do not trouble themselves to examine documents, and keep a record of facts, to present a brief sketch of the state of our affairs east of the Mississippi.

In the session of 1804, Congress passed an act, authorising "the president to erect the shores, waters and inlets of the bay and river Mobile, and of the other rivers, creeks, inlets and bays emptying into the Gulf of Mexico, east of the said river Mobile, &c. into a separate District for the collection of duties on imports and tonnage, and to establish such place within the same as he shall deem expedient to be the port of entry and delivery for such district." As soon as the Spanish governor of Pensacola heard of it, he wrote a letter to Governor Claiborne, informing him that if any attempts were made to carry the act into effect, he should resist it with force of arms. This being communicated to the president by governor Claiborne, he issued his proclamation in great form and solemnity on the 30th of May, exercising the power with which he was invested. And in what manner do you imagine, reader, or rather over what place do you imagine the president exercised this power? Doubtless you will say over the place designated in the act of congress, the bay of Mobile. There you are vastly mistaken. Instead of that, he the said Thomas Jefferson, decided that the shores of the Mobile bay within the old south boundary line of the United States, more than 100 miles up the river, and in the midst of the woods: at which place he very gravely designated Fort Stoddert to be a port of entry and delivery, and as gravely too appointed some simple gentleman, whose name we do not recollect ever to have heard, collector of the port. Which gentleman has been amusing himself from that time to this in the collection of duties to about as much account as a little boy fishes for minnows with a pin hook and line in a tub of rain water.

To complete the farce, when congress met in the fall, Mr. President told them in his message that soon after passing of the act establishing a port of entry and delivery within the Mobile he had learnt that its object was "misunderstood on the part of Spain;" that, however, "candid explanations were immediately given, and assurances that no act was meditated inconsistent with the peace and friendship existing between the two nations: that the Spanish government had, notwithstanding, thought proper to suspend the ratification of the convention of 1802, but that the explanations which would soon reach them, and still more the confirmation of them by the tenor of the instrument [his proclamation] establishing the port and district might reasonably be expected to replace them in the dispositions and views of the whole subject, which originally dictated the convention."

But though this sophistry might pass upon his own congress, it would not cajole Spain. Accordingly, the next message informs us that "On the Mobile our commerce passing through that river continues to be obstructed by arbitrary duties and vexatious searches," &c.

Besides this, it is also to be added, that between the old southern boundary and N. Orleans, a distance of say 100 miles, all lying within the limits claimed by our executive under the treaty, the Spaniards still retain possession of two or three forts, one, Baton Rouge, in great force; from which they have issued more than once, and committed hostilities upon our citizens, seizing their persons and plundering them of their property. In consequence of which, the president, as he informed congress in his last message, "had found it necessary to give orders to our troops on the frontier to be in readiness to protect our citizens, and to repel by arms any similar aggressions in future."

By this time we hope every reader has such a perfect good understanding of the state of things, at the time of passing the appropriation bill, as to comprehend the full force of Mr. Randolph's objections to it, and his disapprobation of the motives in which it originated.

We complain of injuries; and insults, and violations of national sovereignty; and we resort to negotiation for redress; we complain of being kept out of possession of property which we had fairly purchased and paid for; and we offer to purchase and pay for it over again: we complain of wrongs done us by Spain; Spain recriminates, and it is proposed to settle the controversy by amicable negotiation, when France interposes and demands a tribute of two millions of money to be given her before she will consent to let us accommodate our differences, and the administration agrees to give it, and vote it under a false pretence: to complete the business, matters are so contrived that the executive rides himself of all odium, and escapes from all the reproach and indignation which such conduct is calculated to excite, by shifting the burthen and the responsibility of the measure from his own shoulders, and dividing the infamy among four score of his partisans. Such is the history of the appropriation bill, thus far.

[To be concluded in our next number.]

From the People's Friend.

The court journal after stating in pretty full terms the conduct of Spain about the terrible Yrujo (conduct which we will call downright insolent to our government, tho' they will, for their own reasons, call it by the softer epithet of injudicious) puts a bold face upon the matter, indeed a very bold one; considering the quarter whence it comes, and says "the king of Spain must take the consequences." Indeed monsieur he will take the consequences whether you or your patron will or not; and he will put the whole country in for a share of them. Indeed monsieur, you know as well as Don himself does, that the Spaniards is but the puppet—the layman of the no less subtle than redoubtable Napoleon. Does it never occur to you monsieur, that when you display the insolence and injustice of the Spaniard, you exhibit with precisely equal force and truth the imbecility and dastardliness of those who submit to them.

It is a postulate which nobody will venture to deny that an envoy was sent by the president to remonstrate upon certain grievances, and to negotiate, and obtain redress of them. Has any redress been obtained? Has any been promised? Will the executive say that he hopes for any? On the contrary has not the enemy in the affonful re-appointment of De Yrujo made a complete and insolent avowal, that no change on the part of Spain, except perhaps to more aggravated insult, is intended towards us. Let us then ask the president's friends whether any thing can be more disgraceful than to seek by negotiation redress of a wrong; without being prepared and determined to take it by force, if refused to remonstrate. What is it better, thus to publish to the world the conduct of Spain and our submission to it than to say at once "Behold how shamefully we are stripped, and how patiently we bear it." Where will our forbearance extend? Will the executive say, or will any of his agents say for him, whether there is any degree in the political thermometer short of that at which life itself goes out to which the pernicious freezing counsels of our cabinet will not sink us? We fear not. Thus while the country is undergoing disgrace while its independence is threatened, and while the Corsican is casting his net over us, the executive journals amuse the people with a parcel of execrable trash, about the risk which the liberties of posterity would incur from possessing a navy, and erecting a defensive establishment.

Can such things be,

And overcome us like a summer's cloud, Without our special wonder?

THE LATE AFFRAY AT TULLAMORE.

"On the 22d inst. 4 companies of Irish militia, light infantry, the Londonderry, Managh, Sligo and county of Limerick, halted in Tullamore, on their march to their different regiments from Birr, where they had been quartered.

"Early in the evening a militia man was addressed on the bridge by a boy, who cannot be discovered, and who pointing to a German soldier, desired the militia man to take care of those Germans, calling them at the same time by an offensive appellation. Upon this the militia man struck the German a violent blow on the head which brought him to the ground. The German being severely hurt, complained much, and a German officer seized the militia man, and giving him up to the patrol, ordered him to be taken to the guard house. This produced some little confusion, and, unfortunately at that moment the militia bugle sounded to arms. A party of them formed, fixed their bayonets, and rushed up the street towards the guard house, to which the prisoner had been conveyed. One of the officers, captain Jones, of the Sugo, exerted himself with out effect to restrain them, and a brigade major (a German officer, but dressed in a scarlet uniform, and probably not known to be such) drew his sword, ran in front of them, succeeded in appeasing them for a moment, and with the assistance of captain Jones forced them down a lane. There they soon became ungovernable again, rushed into the street in different directions and began to fire upon the German infantry, who by this time had assembled to considerable numbers. The Germans fought at first only with the bayonet, but having made some prisoners they took their ammunition and fired upon the militia. The battle then became general, and several fell on both sides; but general Linsingen, who had before ineffectually interferred to appease the tumult, ordered out the cavalry, charged through the streets, and put an end to the business. During the remainder of the night nothing occurred, the peace being preserved by patrols; and the militia were marched off the next morning by general Dunn (who had been absent upon duty at Birr) upon their several routes, with the exception of such as he detained upon the charge of their having been particularly active. It appears that 25 Germans had been wounded, eight very slightly; one has since died, another (an officer) is not expected to recover. Of the militia 13 are wounded, five slightly; and one died almost immediately on being removed to the hospital.

"It is quite certain that the inhabitants of the town took no part whatever in the affray: one of them, by mere accident, was cut down and badly wounded by a dragon in the charge of cavalry; but there has been no interruption of the harmony and good will which had prevailed antecedently between them and the German troops.

SOLOMON AND SHEBA.

(From Curiosities of Literature.)

"I recollect a pretty story which in the Talmud or Gemara, some Rabbis has attributed to Solomon.

At the foot of the throne stood the queen of Sheba; in each hand she held a wreath of flowers; the one composed of natural the other of artificial flowers. Art in the labor of the mimic wreath, had exquisitely emulated the lively hues, and the variegated beauties of nature; so that at the distance it was held by the queen for the inspection of the king it was deemed impossible for him to decide, as her question imported, which was the natural and which the artificial. The sagacious Solomon seemed poised; yet to be vanquished, tho' in a trifle, by a trifling woman irritated his pride. The son of David—he who had written treaties on the vegetable productions, "from the cedar to the hyssop," to acknowledge himself outwitted by a woman with shreds of paper and glazed paintings! The honor of the monarch's reputation for divine sagacity seemed diminished, and the whole Jewish court looked solemn and melancholy. At length an expedient presented itself to the king—and it must be confessed worthy of the Natural Philosopher. Observing a cluster of bees hovering round a window he commanded that it should be opened. It was opened: the bees rushed into the court, & lighted immediately on one of the wreaths—while not a single one fixed on the other. The decision was not then difficult: the learned Rabbis shook their heads in rapture, and the baffled Sheba had one more reason to be astonished at the wisdom of Solomon.

This would make a pretty poetical tale, it would yield an elegant description, and a pleasing moral; that the bee only rests on the natural beauties, and never fixes on the painted flowers however imitatively the colour may be laid on. This applied to the ladies would give it pungency.

BY THIS DAY'S MAIL.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 23.

While Captain Waterman, who arrived this morning from Amsterdam, was in the British Channel, he understood it to be the general opinion in England that Mr. Fox would speedily resign in consequence of his ill state of health.

The following article was originally published in the Farmer's Monitor, at Herkimer, in the county of Herkimer. The information contained in it, if correct, is certainly deeply interesting to our country. It should at least rouse the vigilance of government.

Whether Col. Burr, as is conjectured in this article, has enlisted partisans for the accomplishment of his projects in the northern part of this state, we know not. But that he has formed, and that he is now employed in executing a scheme highly injurious to the interest, the tranquility, and the welfare of the United States, we have the strongest ground to believe.

Col. Burr may flatter himself that his plots are covered with an impenetrable shield—he may imagine that a knowledge of his connection and intrigues, in Philadelphia a few weeks since, with certain Spanish women and Spanish men is confined to themselves; he may, however, be informed that sufficient is known to others to discover that his "busy mind is still plotting mischief;" sufficient is known to open the eyes of government and the country; and to place them on their guard.

From information recently received, we have been induced to believe that powerful efforts will soon be made to sever the western states from the Union, connect them with Louisiana, and form the whole into a distinct empire with Col. Burr at its head. Whether, if these treasonable efforts should succeed, the new empire will be independent, or a Viceroyalty of Bonaparte, time only will develop.

Important Communication!! By a gentleman of undoubted veracity, who resides in Onondaga county, the writer of this was three days since informed that COMPTON TYLER, Esq. formerly clerk of that county, had just left that place on secret business, in a manner that at once excited curiosity and suspicion.

Mr. Tyler shortly before this went to New York; his circumstances were known to be embarrassed, he was there arrested for a considerable debt; when he came home again his appearance was entirely new and strange; he was dressed and equipped in the most superb manner, with a waiter to attend him; his debt on which he was arrested in New York has been paid off by some unknown hand, and he now had money in abundance in his possession. He said he was engaged in a secret enterprise, but at the same time declared that the object of it was not against government. He was engaged several young gentlemen of talents and address to follow after & meet him at Pittsburg; they are to be dressed and equipped in the same superb style with himself. He has not, it is said, disclosed to them the object of his enterprise; but has promised that when they become acquainted with the scheme if they should at any time within six months afterwards reced from the undertaking, they shall be amply compensated for their time and their expenses borne home again.

The informant further added, that it was conjectured in Onondaga, that the object was either to get possession of the Yazoo lands, or an extensively preconcerted plan to effect a dismemberment of the union, with coloeal Burr at the head of the combination.

Does not every circumstance with which we are acquainted induce us to concur in the latter opinion? Is it not known that Col. Burr has been travelling through every part of that country? What is his object there? Are his own pecuniary circumstances equal to the expense of this, if the object be merely a tour of pleasure? Have not symptoms of disaffection to the union been constantly manifested from Kentucky and Tennessee? And is it not also known that the inhabitants of the other territories there are discontented under the form of government established over them? If the object be to get possession of the Yazoo lands, farmers, and not gentlemen of talents and address, would be wanted; but if a dismemberment of the union be contemplated, then the first draw as many gentlemen as possible in the union, to assist their united influence as such are to be found, principled, and ready to bark in any desperate out a prospect of success. If this be the object, government will be vi crush with a strong arm a nefarious measure.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.
Extract of a letter dated Curacao, Aug.
15, 1806.

"About the first of the month Miranda landed on the Main, and took possession of a fort of six 12 pounders near Coro, without resistance. We cannot learn the number of his troops, but it is generally believed to be about six hundred. I saw a letter of the 13th instant, which came by a dispatch boat from Porto Cavello, and which says this day will arrive two thousand regulars from Caraccas. They will embark immediately for the neighborhood of Coro; for which purpose all the shipping in the harbor are put in requisition; among which are two schooners already laden for Curacao, and on debarking their troops they will proceed to this port. I have conversed with a young man that was interpreter to the prisoners that were taken on board Miranda's schooners. He says that William Lippincott, jun. is sent to Porto Rico, that Daniel R. Durning died of a wound he received when they were taken, that Daniel D. Kemper, Robert Saunders, Thomas Donahue, captain of one of the schooners, Joseph Erle, Thomas Billiop and James Gardin, were hung. The names of the others he does not recollect.

It is said, and I believe with truth, that the dispatches per the boat from Porto Cavello were to ask the assistance of this government by the loan of a Dutch frigate and sloop of war that are stationed here, but that the governor has declined."

NORFOLK, September 23.
On Sunday the British ship Bellona, captain Douglass, of 74 guns, anchored in Hampton Roads. There were four other British men of war in sight of Cape Henry.
The Melampus frigate, which was in the road for some days, sailed yesterday.

A gentleman who came passenger in the ship Protectress from London, and with whom we conversed, says, that they spoke the British frigate Virginia, who informed, that they spoke a cutter from Portsmouth, the captain of which said, accounts were received there of the DEATH of Mr. FOX.

Arrived schooner Diana Talbot, Maxwell, 39 days from Madeira. Left at Madeira ships True American, of and for N.
York, in 8 days; Neptune, of and for do. the next day; two brigs and three schooners, names not recollected. Spoke, August 17, in lat 31 16, long 28, ships John Jay and Renown, of Nantucket, on a whaling voyage, 21 days out. 20th, Cape Henry bearing nearly N. N. W. 6 leagues distant, was boarded by his Britannic majesty's ship Moselle, the Bellona and Bel-isle, of 74 guns, in company.

The ship Protectress, captain Everitt, arrived in Hampton Roads from London on Saturday, and proceeded to City Point.

Alexandria Daily Advertiser.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 27.

A daring attempt to rob the mail between New York and Philadelphia, was made on Tuesday night last, by a gang of villains, with whom there is every reason to believe the driver was in league. By the spirited exertions of the passengers one of the villains, together with the driver, was secured, and committed to the custody of a magistrate.

Just as our paper was going to press, we were informed by a gentleman of respectability, that capt. Sparks, with a number of men, was taken by a party of Spaniards, and that Col. Cushing, from Natchitoches, had been dispatched after them.

We learn by captain Waterman, of the ship Navigator, that Sir Sidney Smith had made a descent on the island of Capri, in the kingdom of Naples, and had taken the capital by storm.

Extract of a letter from Curacao, dated August 27.

"This market is completely glutted with flour, great quantities having arrived within a few days. Not an article of Spanish produce at market. The intercourse with the main has ceased. An embargo is supposed to exist there. General Miranda is at Aruba."

CASE OF THE BRILLIANT.

A letter from Halifax, dated August 23, says, "This morning I was present when the case of the Brilliant was brought up for decision. She was owned by the Hollingsworths of Baltimore, and was taken on her voyage from Martinique or Guadaloupe, going to that port, and laden with the produce of the island. The fact of its being, both ship and cargo, American property, was fully established, and it was further proved, that the owners never re-exported but always sold the cargoes of their vessels to others. But it so happened that a certificate of origin was found on board, relating to a cargo shipped on board another vessel, which the owners with a frankness and honesty, which should have procured them more just judgment, declared was intended to be delivered with the cargo to which it referred, in case the purchaser intended to export it, in order to obtain a remission of duties in the mother country.
His honor the judge most wisely considered it as establishing the continuity of the voyage and accordingly condemned both ship and cargo. This judge, who figures away in a three tailed wig and scarlet robes, has, it seems, written a book "on the trade of neutrals," the principles of which, however absurd and contrary to law and justice, he is determined, at all hazards, to carry into practice."

Whatever the opinion of the people may be of the beauty of that kind of way of wearing their caps and bonnets which is now the fashion with the ladies, every scholar will be disposed to think that the notion of them has been drawn from the depths of classic lore. Tacitus has recorded something of the kind of the emperor Nero's wife Poppaea, who was—don't be offended with my dear madam!— a celebrated coquette in her day. She possessed the art of self-embellishment commonly called dross, with all its appen-dages, to an exquisite degree. A degree which, if we were to believe that great historian, we must consider as touching upon artifice. But as she was a lady, and above all an empress, it would be impolite and not very gallant to believe a hoary Latin author's innuendoes against her. Still, what he says might have supplied a hint, and as the ladies are great readers they may have taken it. He relates that this same coquette of antiquity, Poppaea, used to cover a part of her face to raise a more exquisite idea of her beauty. "Velata oris parte ne satiaret aspectum." Or, in plain English, veiled part of her face that she might not glut the eyes of the spectators with her charms. Here is encouragement to matrons to send their daughters to the Latin school.

Correction.—The statement in our last of sir Edward Berry's having resigned and gone for England, in disgust with admiral Cochrane in not attacking the French fleet, we are told, by two gentlemen who were in the West-Indies at the time, is incorrect; for that Sir Edward sailed for England many days before Admiral C. went in pursuit of them, owing to his bad state of health.

From the Port Folio.
During a period of four or five hours, in which we were indulged with the hasty perusal of a small portion of Mr. Moore's new poems, we transcribed as many pages as possible for the amusement of our readers. We will not delay the pleasure that our friends of sensibility and taste will derive from the following, by an expression of our own opinions or feelings. Before a Grecian temple we will erect no clumsy porch, but introduce at once the admiring connoisseur.

LOVE AND REASON.
TWAS in the summer time so sweet, When hearts and flowers are both in season,
That—who of all the world, should meet,
On early dawn but Love and Reason?

Love told his dream of yesternight, While reason talk'd about the weather;
The morn, in sooth, was fair and bright,
And on they took their way together.

The boy in many a gambol flew, While Reason, like a Juno, stalk'd, And from her portly figure threw A lengthen'd shadow as she walk'd.

No wonder Love, as on they past, Should find that sunny morning chill, For still the shadow Reason cast, Fell on the boy, and cool'd him still.

In vain he tried his wings to warm, Or find a path way not so dim, For still the maid's gigantic form, Would pass between the sun and him.

"This must not be," said little Love,
"The sun was made for more than you," So, turning through a myrtle grove, He bade the portly nymph adieu.

Now gaily roves the laughing boy, O'er many a mound, by many a stream, In ev'ry breeze inhaling joy,
And drinking bliss in ev'ry beam.

From all the gardens, all the bowers, He call'd the many sweets they shaded,
And ate the fruits, and swell'd the flowers,
'Till taste was gone, and odour faded!

But now the sun, in pomp of noon, Look'd blazing o'er the parched plains, Alas! the boy grew languid soon,
And fever thrill'd through all his veins!

The dew forsook his baby brow, No more with vivid bloom he smil'd—Oh! where was tranquil Reason now, To cast her shadow o'er the child!

Beneath a green and aged palm, His foot at length for shelter turning,
He saw the nymph reclining calm, With brow as cool as his was burning.

"Oh! take me to that bosom cold," In murmurs at her feet he said,
And Reason op'd her garment's fold, And flung it round his fever'd head.

He felt her bosom's icy touch,
And soon it lull'd his pulse to rest;
For ah! the chill was quite too much,
And love expir'd on Reason's breast!

Strayed or Stolen,

From off the commons of Alexandria, on Saturday, the 26th instant.

A DARK GRAY FILLEY, rising four years old, 13 and half hands high, her mane, which is rather darker than the other hair, hangs on the off side; branded on the near buttock with the letter S. her off hind foot is coked. She had an old saddle and bridle on her when she went off; the saddle was without a pad, but had a blanket under it.
As she was foaled and raised near this place, I think it probable she has been stolen. I will give a liberal reward to any person who will return her to me or give information so that I get her again.

RAN AWAY, from the subscriber, on Sunday night last, a negro man, named STEPHEN, who calls himself Stephen Tarkenton, about 35 years of age, and about 5 feet 6 inches high, strong made, broad face, high cheeks and coarse boney features—he was formerly used to work in a vessel as a cook, which he understands tolerable well, also washing and house work, which he has been accustomed to occasionally. Took with him a half worn brown broad cloth coat, a dark striped molskin jacket, a pair corduroy pantaloons nearly white, and a pair nankeen ditto, some white linen shirts, and an ozonaburg shirt and pair of trousers, also a black fur hat, and is supposed to have other cloaths not particularly known. He is a remarkable artful fellow and will likely change his name and cloaths, and also may have got a pass. Masters of vessels and all other persons are warned not to harbor or employ said fellow in any manner whatever.
